Hospice Care Planning: An Interdisciplinary Guide Cynthia L. Frozena

Hospice Care Planning: An Interdisciplinary Guide is a process-oriented manual, with an emphasis on commonly experienced physical, emotional and spiritual problems of dying clients and their families. The authors designed this manual to be used as a guide with the flexibility to allow for the individualization that hospice clients require. It recognizes that time is short, and it honors the reality that while cure is not probable, comfort is always possible. With this unique guide, you will...

- Review a history of hospice; hospice staff member characteristics and responsibilities; the "team" effort; and much more
- Focus on commonly experienced physical, emotional, and spiritual problems of dying clients and their families
- Create successful hospice care plans that are holistic, interdisciplinary, and individualized for each client and his or her family
- Discover ways to empower the client and the family to have confidence in their own abilities
- Explore how hospice team members provide care for the dying as experts in their disciplines, and are skilled in the practice of "role blurring," unique to hospice care
